Von Ein Kunde This book gently draws us into the life of Thea Woolf and into the world of this Jewish nurse who lived and worked in Alexandria, Egypt during World War II. She was born in Germany and trained to be a nurse there. She then served as a nurse in the Jewish hospital in Alexandria for many years. Being in Egypt before and during the war years not only saved her life but also thrust her into a leading role of helping Jewish refugees who came to or through Egypt in their attempt to escape the holocaust. She relates several stories of people who took part in this fight to save so many lives. These stories are both tragic and uplifting. We discover that Muslims as well as Jews worked together for this cause, that for these caring people human life was more important to them than any religious differences.

Several hundred women from all over the world were nominated for the Awards in recognition of their ongoing global efforts for equal rights and opportunities for women. One hundred of the nominees were selected as Heroines based on the following three criteria: First, they act courageously to achieve equal rights and freedom for women. Second, they risk their social acceptance, financial security, health, or even their lives on behalf on women. Third, they serve as role models for women and girls. The selected 100 Heroines were announced at a celebration dinner in Rochester, New York, on Thursday, October 29, 1998.
