Amazing pictures and funny anecdotesVon Tobi1164This book full of stories from a couple travelling through Thailand is easy to read and made me laugh - 5 stars for the amazing pictures! While reading you might want to book a trip to experiance something like this yourself.I would recommend this for everyone who is planning a trip to

Thailand for some ideas or those who are yet unsure, it will definitely convince you!

Kurzbeschreibung Not Thaid Down is the story of one British couples backpacking adventures around Thailand, a country they've visited several times. This travelogue is more than a guide and is written in an easy-to-read style and supported by hundreds of high quality photographs. On their initial trips to Southeast Asia they played it safe, and like so many, travelled on a package deal. The more they went though, the greater their sense of adventure, and so rather than travelling to a rigid schedule they decided to go it alone, making it up as they went along. For this venture, Gavin Mary-Anne took three weeks off and flew to Bangkok, from where they commenced a whirlwind three-day trip up to Kanchanaburi, an area famous for its Bridge on the River Kwai as well as its stunning jungle scenery and waterfalls. Not to be missed was a trip to Hellfire Pass, a section of the notorious Burma Railway, where 70 years previously, instead of the area being full of excited holidaymakers, it was a vision of hell itself as prisoners of war and forced labourers built a railway through dense jungle and solid rock. Then it was time to see some of Thailand's world famous beach scenery. Jumping on a night train they travelled down to Trang in Thailand's far south to then head over by ferry and private longtail boat to two of the country's most fabulous islands, Mook and Kradan. Subsequently, the jungle again beckoned and a trip was made to the Khao Sok National Park famous for its prime virgin jungle and mountainous scenery as well as its beautiful lake complete with floating resorts. Deciding to then see two of their old favourites, they travelled over to Koh Phangan and Koh Tao. After chilling out at those popular islands the long journey back to Bangkok brought the holiday to a close, just as martial law and a night-time curfew had descended on the country. The text is supported by almost 400 colour photographs that bring the story to life, helping the reader visualise the entire adventure. It's the closest you'll get to actually being there. Areas visited in Thailand include: Bangkok, Kanchanaburi, Erawan Falls, Hellfire Pass on the Burma Railway, Bridge on the River Kwai, Trang, Koh Mook, Emerald Cave, Koh Kradan, Khao Sok National Park, Namtaloo Cave, Koh Phangan and Koh Tao. About the author: Gavin Dodds is a freelance graphic designer and photographer. Publisher's Note: The images contained in this Kindle version are not low resolution and are not overly compressed. Doing so would have enabled the author to reduce the file size and earn a higher royalty, but in the interests of the reader's experience he chose not to do so.
