hits home. It is a remarkable, deeply moving and compelling tale. It tells the story of a struggling single father, a man with a big heart, a family man, soulful and passionate, his struggle with his autistic daughter in a very dark period in their life after her mother attempted suicide. We have heard so much about stories like these and watch them play out in our lives and around us but reading it here gave a different feel, it makes you wonder where really lies the lines between fact and fiction because those lines sometimes gets blurr. Olivia perfected these characters and they are so 3D, their thoughts, actions and emotions are so palpable, I feel like these people are my neighbours, I feel like I know them. This was a sad, beautiful, tragic story. Its worth your time.
