Entertaining and humorous book from Christina perspectiveVon Mindy O'DellThe author of this book, Erin MacPherson, writes about herself: I am a mom. And a Christian. And I love to write about life and parenting and God and every place where those three things intersect. Like Erin, I am a mom of school age children - always looking to learn more about womanhood and parenthood from a Christian perspective. And I love spending time with friends, having a cup of coffee and exchanging ideas and tips... and reading Erin MacPherson's book The Christian Mama's Guide to the Grade School Years - Everything You Need to Know to Survive (and Love) Sending Your Kid Off into the Big Wide World made me feel exactly like I was doing that. On page 11 of her book the author writes: Above all, my heart in writing this book isn't to tell you what to do and how to do it, but to walk with you on this road and to share my own journey with you. Because when we walk together - as Christian mamas, friends and sisters in Christ we can learn together. And raise amazing, God loving kids in the process.Erin MacPherson's book is an easy read an excellent book to read when waiting at a doctor's office, at the post office or anywhere else where you have to wait and pass time. The author's style of writing is very entertaining and humorous. To be very honest, I don't think I learned a lot of new things about what it means to be a parent of school age children, but it was good to be reminded of a couple of things (covering your children in prayers, lean on God more than ever, not to lose my calm when things are going wrong, etc.).Erin MacPherson's mom, a very experienced grad school principal contributed to the book with her notes from the principal's office, tips and tricks from the other side of the parent-child-school relationship.All in all a good and entertaining book that I can recommend to all my mommy friends.
