Beautiful! Thought provoking! Touching!Von Ein KundeThis small book of Francis Thompson's poems is a beautiful experience. "The Hound of Heaven" is the crowning glory of the piece. How often I have found my self running from the "Footsteps" following me. I think the line "All which I took from thee I did but take, Not for thy harms, But just that thou might'st seek it in My arms." is one of the most comforting to those who have lost and suffered. Also very special are Daisy and Little Jesus. Francis Thompson was born before his time a little appreciated then but he is definitely a poet for our moral declining culture. I am fascinated by his love of nature. I would recommend these little poems to anyone who feels lost, afraid, alone and in pain, and to anyone who wants to feel closer to God.
